Notes:

- (1) Asiatique The Riverfront is a large open-air mall in Bangkok, Thailand. It is situated in the former docks of the East Asiatic Company, and faces the Chao Phraya River and Charoen Krung Road. The complex opened in 2012 after extensive renovation of the site.
- (2) Bang Sadet Ecotourism Village: The villagers of Bang Sadet sub district, Pa Mok district in Angthong often suffered from floods until the royal visit of their Majesties on the 28th of April 1976. According to the royal thought, the earth in that area was suitable for making miniature dolls, and thus this marked the establishment of the doll project under royal patronage. The locals continue the royal project up to the present day, and the miniature dolls have gained international popularity. The villagers mostly have farm, produce incense sticks and court dolls, and do fish farming. Besides admiring the shaded and magnificent scene over the bank of the Chao Phraya River, visitors can observe court doll production in the friendly villagers' houses. Centre of collaboration in the form of a co-operative system resides at Ban Bang Sadet Court Doll Centre. Also, there are number of Thai houses hosting home stay for tourists.
- (3) Wat Chaiwattanaram: One of the most visited historical site of Ayutthaya, Wat Chaiwattanaram rests on the bank of the Chao Phraya River, to the west of the city island. The temple was ordered to build in 1630 by King Prasat Thong to honor his mother, featuring the architectural style influenced by Angkor temple in Cambodia—its unique feature is a large, central prang (Khmer-style pagoda) surrounded by smaller prangs, symbolizing Mount Sumeru, the gods' mountain according to Hindu belief. The lighting at night makes the temple even more exotic and beautiful.
- (4) Ayutthaya, the second capital of Thailand from 1351-1767, which is well-known as one of Thailand's historical sites.
- (5) Koh Kerd: In 2005, Mr. Lamphun Phanwai, former village headman, established Koh Kerd Homestay with 10 members; it is based on the idea that a homestay program would bring visitors into the communities and create extra income for local people. In 2008 the number increased to 17 members. There are now 10 households that can host visitors. Koh herd is traditional Thai dessert center, herbal medicine, hydroponic farm, saving group that can visit and learn about local techniques in the production of herbal medicine ball, herbs in the community at Baan Kaew Nai Suan, attend Thai dessert cooking class (Kanom Kong, Sam Gleu, Kao Tom Mud), and visit and tour on agricultural center at Bang Sai Royal Folk Arts and Crafts Center.

- (6) Bang Pa-In Palace: This summer palace was first built in the reign of King Prasat Thong (1629-1656) in the Ayutthaya period. It was frequented by the king and his successors until the fall of Ayutthaya in 1767. Late on, the palace was restored by King Rama IV (1851-1868). But it was not until the reign of King Rama V (1868-1910) that Bang Pa-In Palace was fully developed and took its present shape. During his reign, several magnificent buildings in the Western style were constructed, such as Utthayan Phumisathian and Warophat Phiman Mansions. Also, the two-storeyed Chinese-style palace, Wehat Chanrun, was built and presented to the King in 1889 by Chinese merchants as a token of the long-lasting brotherly relationship between the Thai and Chinese peoples.
- (7) Ayutthaya Tourist Center: Ayutthaya Tourist Center used to be town hall. The building's ground floor is a tourist service center providing information for tourists. Upstairs is an exhibition of Phra Nakhon Si Ayutthaya history, showing the old capital's stories, history, ways of life, local wisdom and recommended tourist attractions in the province. The end of the exhibition area there is a video showing with options of Thai, English, Chinese and Japanese subtitles.
- (8) Wat Phra Si Sanphet: Wat Phra Sri Sanphet is not only a significant historical site, but also considered as the spiritual center of Thais for a long time. Situated within the royal palace grounds, Wat Phra Sri Sanphet is the royal monastery and therefore no monk is allowed to reside at. However, the temple served to conduct ceremonies within the royal court, such as the ritual to drink an oath of allegiance. It is also regarded as an equivalence of Wat Mahathat in Sukhothai and a model for Wat Phra Sri Ratana Sasadaram (the royal temple of the Emerald Buddha) or Wat Phra Kaew in Bangkok.
- (9) Ayothaya Floating Market: This is an area of 60 hectares of retro antique market. There are many shops; souvenir, clothing, OTOP, Thai desserts, variety of food and snacks and also cruise ship vendors selling snacks and food. In addition, wide selections of comfortable tables and seats are prepared for visitors around the market to watch Thai traditional shows.
- (10) The Grand Palace and the Emerald Buddha: This is the most famous place that is a must for all tourists. The Grand Palace and the Emerald Buddha were built after King Rama I ascended the throne as the founder of the Chakri Dynasty on 6 April 1782 and have undergone several repairs and renovations.
- (11) The Royal Chitralada Projects: His Majesty the King initiated the "Royal Chitralada Agricultural Projects" within the compound of his residence, Chitralada Villa, to solve many problems and struggles especially in agriculture occupations that are respected as the backbone of the country. Since 1961, the Royal Chitralada Projects have been implementing a diverse range of activities for experimentation and research purposes, aimed at solving various problems concerned with agriculture, and also implementing His Majesty the King's initiatives called "Sufficiency Economy" that encourage the villagers to become self-sufficient and improve their long-term quality of life. Once they yield results, the projects are used for demonstration purposes and so that those interested members of the general public could visit and study them and make use of the knowledge thus gained for their own purposes. In addition, the projects operate on a non-profit basis.
